State unveils safety protocols for marathon

Marathon Monday. No drones, costumes or coolers allowed.

Two years after bombs killed three, injured more than 260 and rocked Boston to its core, the state has unveiled safety procedures for this year's Boston Marathon.

Like last year, spectators are being discouraged from carrying backpacks, suitcases, coolers and large handbags near the 26-mile course, which has been designated a "drone-free-zone," according to policies released by the Boston Athletic Association (BAA) and Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) Monday.

Those policies advise the public not to operate any type of drone, including remotely controlled model aircraft over or near the course or anywhere within sight of the runners or spectators.

Grandstand seats at the finish-line will require an invitation from the BAA and all people entering that seating area will be subject to security screenings. All bags may be inspected as well.

Spectators looking to catch the start of the race in Hopkinton will have to pass through security checkpoints and expect their bags to be screened.

Runners who board busses from Boston Common to Hopkinton will also be subject to screenings.

The official policy also frowns on "bandits" running the route — where people who are not registered run anyway.

"The BAA reserves the right to remove any person from the course who is not displaying an official bib number from the BAA," reads part of the policy.

Units or groups such as military truck-marchers and cyclists unless officially sanctioned, will not be allowed to participate, according to the state.

No bags will be allowed in certain areas near the start in Hopkinton, near the finish line or along certain parts of the course. Runners will be allowed to carry a one-gallon clear plastic bag for food items or sports drinks only.

In fact, authorities are encouraging spectators along the whole race route, including Hopkinton, Ashland, Framingham, Natick, Wellesley, Newton, Brookline and Boston, to carry personal items in clear plastic bags, which would "enhance public safety and speed security screening," according to MEMA.

Unattended items, like bags, will cause delays, according to authorities.

Spectators should expect a "significant" presence of uniformed and plain-clothed law enforcement officers along the route, according to police.

The 119th Boston Marathon is slated for next Monday, April 20.

Man charged with schoolyard shooting

A 20-year-old Roxbury man was arraigned Monday on charges he opened fire near a schoolyard filled with children over the weekend.

Prosecutors allege Semaj Leary opened fire near the Trotter Middle School Sunday, causing children and adults to flee the area. Police were patrolling the area in response to recent gang activity when they saw the people running from the schoolyard.

Leary took off running. Police pursued him on foot though multiple fenced yards along Harrison Street before losing him. Police eventually found him hiding underneath a nearby Nissan Rogue.

A silver Cobra .380 was found along Leary's path of flight. The gun was found to be jammed, according to the Suffolk County District Attorney's Office, with one spent round of ammunition.

An off-duty state trooper who was at the scene of the shooting described two teens fleeing bicycles.

A search of their path of flight turned up a second handgun that Boston police seized as evidence. METRO

Firefighters battle 3-alarm fire in Newton

Fire crews knocked down a 3-alarm fire on Placid Road in Newton late Monday morning, and fortunately there were no serious injuries. The residents were reportedly not home when the fire broke out. The blaze caused extensive damage to the rear and attic of the single family home. Fire officials said it was initially reported as a house explosion but later said there was no evidence of a blast. A firefighter was treated for burns to his hands. The cause of the fire is unknown.

No verdict yet in Hernandez murder trial

Hernandez / GETTY IMAGES

The jury in the murder trial of former National Football League player Aaron Hernandez ended its fifth day of deliberations on Monday without reaching a verdict on whether he is guilty of killing the boyfriend of his fiancée's sister in 2013.

Hernandez, 25, a former tight end for the New England Patriots, is accused of fatally shooting semiprofes-sional football player Odin Lloyd of Dorchester in an industrial park near Hernandez's North Attleboro home in June 2013.

If convicted of first-degree murder, Hernandez would be sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole. A second-degree murder conviction would lead to a life sentence with the possibility of parole after 15 years.

The trial at the Bristol County Superior Court in Fall River is the first of two Hernandez faces this year. After the jury in Fall River delivers a verdict, Hernandez will face trial in Boston on charges of fatally shooting two Cape Verdean men outside a nightclub in 2012.

He has pleaded not guilty in both cases. REUTERS

Jodi Arias gets life without parole

An Arizona judge sentenced former waitress Jodi Arias to life in prison with no possibility of parole on Monday for shooting and stabbing to death her ex-boyfriend in 2008.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Sherry Stephens said Arias' crime, which attracted national attention, was "especially cruel ... [and] involved substantial planning and preparation."

Arias, 34, had escaped a possible death sentence last month after a lone juror at her sentencing retrial refused to back the death penalty throughout five days of deliberations.

She was found guilty of murder in 2013 after a trial packed with lurid details and graphic testimony that drew a large audience. Prosecutors said she killed her former partner in a jealous rage while Arias argued she acted in self-defense.

Shackled and clad in jail stripes, Arias told the court she had long wanted to be put to death for the crime.

"But I had to fight for my life just like I did on June 4, 2008, because I realized how selfish it would be for me to escape accountability for this mess I created," Arias said.

Ex-student sought in shooting death of North Carolina college worker

A manhunt was under way for a 20-year-old former student accused of fatally shooting a longtime school employee at Wayne Community College in Goldsboro, North Carolina, on Monday, local authorities said.

The morning shooting prompted a lockdown and evacuation of the campus. Police said the suspect, identified as Kenneth Morgan Stancil III, carried a long gun to the third floor of a campus building and shot print shop director Ron Lane, who had worked at the college for 18 years.

Author Guenter Grass dies at 87

German novelist Guenter Grass, the Nobel Prize-winning author of "The Tin Drum," died on Monday at the age of 87, his publishers said. Grass spurned the German tradition of keeping a cool intellectual distance, insisting that a writer's duty was to be at the frontline of moral and political debate. For many, he was the voice of a German generation that came of age in World War II. REUTERS

China to overtake United States as worst polluter

China is poised to overtake the United States as the main cause of man-made global warming since 1990, the benchmark year for U.N.-led action.

China's cumulative greenhouse gas emissions since 1990, when governments were becoming aware of climate change, will outstrip those of the United States in 2015 or 2016, according to separate estimates by experts in Norway and the U.S.

The shift, reflecting China's stellar economic growth, raises questions about historical blame for rising temperatures and more floods, desertification, heat waves and sea level rise. REUTERS

Plea deals could spare educators prison time

Ten former Atlanta public school educators, convicted earlier this month of racketeering in one of the nation's largest test-cheating scandals, should consider plea deals or face likely prison time, a judge said on Monday. Ryan Reynolds hit by paparazzi's car

This is no way to get an exclusive, guys! Ryan Reynolds was the victim of a hit-and-run in his native Canada when a paparazzo's car struck him in a parking garage and then totally fled the scene — most likely because the only way they know how to drive is in chase mode. "While walking, Ryan was struck by a paparazzi driving a car through an underground parking garage," the actor's rep says in a statement. "The man fled the scene. Ryan is OK." The incident happened in the residential parking structure of the Shangri-La hotel in Vancouver, Reynolds' hometown. CBC News reports suggest the actor was injured, but police did not release further details.

Lindsay Lohan calling the cops on mom

Somehow I knew the bond between Lindsay Lohan and mom, Dina "people think we're sisters!" Lohan, wouldn't last forever, and this may be what finally does in the relationship. Lindsay is reportedly threatening to call the cops on her mom because Dina was in selling off Lindsay's clothing, furniture and artwork online and to friends without Lindsay's permission. Dina's totally sound logic is that items Lindsay put in her garage for storage while filming her Oprah Winfrey-produced reality series are totally fair game to sell off now. Because possession is nine-tenths of the law and all.

But that's not all. Lindsay is also freaking out because Dina is trying to horn in on her love of England. Lindsay reportedly hit the roof when she heard that Dina was in talks to join the U.K.'s "Celebrity Big Brother" this summer. "Lindsay flipped and began screaming, saying [Dina] had no right to come to England," a source tells TMZ. Hey, Lindsay, look on the bright side: She'd be locked up the whole time anyway.

But Rose insists it's all bogus. "It's so annoying. It just never happened. They

Behind the music with The Mowgli's

Interview. Katie Jayne Earl tells us the stories behind three songs off their new album, "Kids In Love."

California alt-rock band The Mowgli's are known for their feel-good hits, like "San Francisco" and "Say It, Just Say It." The good vibes continue with their new album, "Kids In Love." We talk to band member Katie Jayne Earl about the deeper meaning behind three of the album's big standout tracks.

'Kids In Love'

When it comes to the title track, Earl says the band was trying to portray love at its purest: "We were trying to encapsulate that unjaded, very open-eyed image of love [you have] when you're a kid," she says. She wants fans to know that even if you've had your heart broken and think you have nothing left to give, you get back to that happy place. "It's [somewhere] we can all get back to," she says. "There are people in your life that can take you back to that 'kid in love' place and it's a pretty special place."

somber than The Mowgli's usual sunny songs, but Earl says it still has their classic message, just from a different angle. "All of us [in the band] have been through a lot over the past couple years — and in life in general — and it's about the idea that there's a light at the end of the tunnel," she says. "If you're the best version of yourself, you can shine through any darkness that comes your way. It's a reminder to love more and shine as bright as you can in the darkness that inevitably in the world."

'Whatever Forever'

"Whatever Forever" is the only Mowgli's song that two of the band members, Josh Hogan and Colin Louis Dieden, have tattoos of. "Years ago, we were in Lawrence, Kansas and Josh and Colin saw a sticker that said 'Whatever Forever.' The guys just loved it and it sort of became their slogan," Earl tells us. "It's definitely one of our favorites to perform."

Katie Jayne Earl tells us that being the only female in The Mowgli's has made her embrace femininity even more. / PROVIDED

Throwing out the meditation rule book

Mallika Chopra teaches us the rule-free way to peace of mind.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

Mallika Chopra's last name is synonymous with well-being. Her father is spiritual guru Deepak Chopra, and she's been meditating from the age of 9. But in the decades since, the 43-year-old Chopra would find herself living a life that was out of touch with the principles that were important to her. Her new book, "Living with Intent," chronicles her yearlong "somewhat messy journey" back to living a healthy, happy and more purposeful life.

Make it a family affair

The most common question Chopra gets is how to get kids involved. "If you meditate, your kids will be watching you and they'll want to mimic you," she says. The peace of mind can be especially helpful to them: "I had a lot of stability even through the tumultuous teen years because I had this tool."

"I've grown up around this stuff, but then I've wandered and found myself frazzled and crazy and out of balance," she says. "And so I went back and looked at what were the techniques in my life that had helped me feel like every day I was doing something that aligned with my deepest desires."

One of the pillars of her book is meditation, and whether you've never tried it before or couldn't make it stick, Chopra shared with us some advice on how to make it part of your own imperfect path to a more fulfilling life.

Don't wait for life to change to start

"The reality of life is we're trying to balance a lot of things, and I lost myself," Chopra says of trying to balance her work with the wellness portal Intent.com, and her family life with her husband, and two daughters, 10 and 13. A big part of her book is checking in with yourself — and not just when there's something to criticize. Let go of your guilt and start (again).

Which celebs meditate? Visit metro.us

Meditation can be done anywhere — just close your eyes to the chaos around you and focus on your mantra. istock

There's no set time

The popular recommendation of 20 minutes in the morning and afternoon is a great goal, but it's not realistic for most people, including Chopra. "Sometimes I do it for 5 minutes, sometimes I do it for 20 minutes, sometimes I don't do it for two weeks," she confesses. Don't set a timer; just take a minute when you can (or when you need it) and create a mental oasis.

There's no "right" way

Your mind doesn't have to be completely empty, and you don't have to be in a quiet room — she sometimes gets a session in while waiting in the carpool line. For the ultimate beginner, she teaches a very basic meditation: close your eyes, take a few deep breaths, and anchor yourself by repeating a phrase like "I am;" when your attention drifts, refocus by coming back to the words.

Put this in your tank on race day

If you're preparing for next Monday's Boston Marathon or just training for another long-distance event, you need the right equipment — and not just on your feet. Before you lace up your sneakers on race day, we've got 10 training tips to fuel up for best results.

1 Snack smart before training runs by enjoying a carb-rich bite with some protein, like an apple and string cheese or a banana with nut butter.

2 Try different snacks to figure out what works best for you. You want to feel energized and satisfied (think granola bar or trail mix) — not bloated and lethargic (nix donuts and chips).

3 During long runs (over an hour), alternate between water and sports drinks, which contain electrolytes and carbs to help balance fluid levels.

4 Experiment with eating while running — whether it's gels, blocks, chews, sweet potato or raisins — to see what feels best.

5 Load up on anti-inflammatory foods to minimize soreness. Choose picks that are rich in omega-3 fats (salmon, walnuts); vitamin C (bell peppers, oranges); carotenoids (sweet potato, carrots); anthocyanins (berries, cherries); quercetin (apples, apricots); and ginger and turmeric.

6 Steer clear of greasy, fried or junk foods that lack nutrients and interfere with optimal performance.

7 Add a high-quality carb at each meal starting a few days before your race, to store energy in your muscles. Try a few spoonfuls of quinoa on a salad or an extra veggie at dinner.

8 On race day, combine high-performance carbs with protein a few hours before the start of your event. Best bets: A whole-grain bagel with nut butter and banana slices, scrambled eggs with chopped tomato and whole-grain toast, or oatmeal with berries and nuts.

9 Avoid high-fat or super-high-fiber foods the morning of — they take longer to digest and could cause tummy trouble.

10 For optimal recovery, have a bite that's rich in carbs (divide your body weight in half — that's the amount of carbs in grams you need) with 10 to 20 grams of protein. You can split it up: Have half within 30 minutes of crossing the finish line, and the other half within the next two hours.

Eat right for your run.

Reunited, and it can feel so good

Every spring, many of my young adult psychotherapy clients return from Passover or Easter celebrations with more or less the same question: "How to do I maintain my peace of mind and self-respect and still remain connected to my family (who either don't understand/accept me or whose behavior I find challenging)?"

From a psychological perspective, it's one of the most important questions a person can ask, and one that some people spend their whole lives trying to answer, especially if they come from dysfunctional families. Staying true to ourselves while negotiating significant relationships with people who don't always share our ideas or values is the key to getting along with others, whether among our intimate circles or society. And coming to terms with our family relationships affects all our other relationships.

Because family bonds are so psychically powerful, successfully navigating them means being able to distinguish the ties that constrain from those that connect. Here are four tips to help you cope with the most important people in your life:

Take a personal inventory

Think about who you are and how you feel when you feel loved, seen, and really shine. Focusing your mind this way will help prevent you from taking comments too personally or feeling that your family is a reflection of, or on, you.

Set boundaries

Distinguish between the little annoyances you can let slide and the larger issues that may require you to speak up for yourself. Know there's a difference between taking a stand and making a scene. Keep boundaries loose enough to allow for positive exchanges.

Explore your assumptions

Instead of being focused on how you are perceived by your family members, consider whether you are seeing who they really are. We may be tempted to demonize people, instead of taking an honest look at how our own prejudices, assumptions, expectations and vulnerabilities.

Try to keep a sense of humor

When all else fails, listen to Anne Lamott: "Families [are] hard, hard, hard, no matter how cherished and astonishing they may also be. ... Earth is Forgiveness School. You might as well start at the dinner table."

Horoscope

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20

Proceed with caution. Someone will purposely put obstacles in your path. Be clear and concise with your comments so that your words cannot be turned against you.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21

Business meetings and social events will be stressful. If you maintain your course and concentration, you will pick up tips regarding a partnership.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20

Before you start on a new project, complete what you've left undone or what you've been avoiding. It will be easier to concentrate once you have cleared your mind.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22

Don't allow anyone to push you into doing something you don't want to do. Your financial concerns will be lessened if you set up a realistic budget that you can maintain.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22

Don't remain in a partnership that is detrimental to your health. If your feelings have gone cold, be fair by discussing your emotions honestly.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Positive changes are on the horizon. Consider your current options, and if things are not satisfactory, don't hesitate to make a move. Hear what your contacts have to offer.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22

Don't try to persuade others to agree with your opinions. Travel is highlighted, along with making new friends. A pleasure or business trip will bring unanticipated insights.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21

Listen to the voice of experience. You can help yourself and those around you by utilizing strategies that worked for people who faced similar circumstances.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21

A friend or family member will come to you for advice. Don't try to fit too much into your day. You will avoid frustration by letting matters unfold naturally.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20

Money matters will upset you. Enlist a financial consultant to help you deal with your income issues. The more time you spend planning for your future security, the better off you will be.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Stop limiting yourself. Get out and participate. Sitting on the sidelines will not get you the recognition or rewards you are looking for. Show the world what you have to offer.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20

Workplace headaches will cause undue anxiety. You are competent and hardworking, but you need a break. Get together with some friends. EUGENIA LAST

Letters to the editor

Criminals are people, too

Re: 'Harsh penalties, not death, for criminals' (Metro, April 13) I agree that there should never be any death penalty, but the penalties suggested by letter writer J. Andrew Smith are unconstitutional and unethical. Our Constitution specifically protects against cruel and unusual punishment. Forced unpaid labor and conducting of medical experiments on humans is reminiscent of the torturous conditions in Nazi labor camps — and is, without a doubt, cruel and unusual. Many people are in prison for committing victimless crimes, including drug offenses, and they are clogging up the prison system, when they could instead be productive members of their communities at home. Wide-scale prison reform would save taxpayers' money and help to repair communities that face unfairly high rates of incarceration. For more violent criminals, harsher penalties are not the answer. Prison should be used for rehabilitation, not to inflict unnecessary and painful punishments.

JORDAN RUBENSTEIN, VIA EMAIL

Letter writer J. Andrew Smith's proposal of slavery and medical punishment for felons is troublesome and would be horribly out of character for our justice system. We strive, however imperfectly, to treat even the worst offenders with the basic human dignity and respect that they have denied their victims so that we do not let the savage actions of the few corrupt our own dedication to the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. A person who argues that prisoners should be enslaved and subjected to medical experimentation and dissection forgets that the vast majority of felons do not open their trials with an admission of their guilt; a great deal of innocent people have been convicted of felonies in the past, and we cannot responsibly adopt a legal system which assumes that our ability to discern a defendant's guilt — and what's more, their inhumanity — is perfect.

Perfect, from start to finish

MLB. Baseball season opened at Fenway Park Monday and it looks as though it could be a magical year.

The Fenway Park PA system blared U2's tired song "Beautiful Day" after Tom Brady completed a speedy and wild first pitch to David Ortiz on Monday. Despite the Red Sox' penchant for living in the past, no one was complaining about hearing the 15-year-old song, as it truly was a beautiful afternoon at the old ballyard.

Brady, Bill Belichick, Robert and Jonathan Kraft brought out their Super Bowl trophies to show off to the Fenway crowd as part of the home opening ceremonies in Boston, and by the end of the game, Red Sox fans had visions of baseball hardware dancing in their heads as the Sox crushed the hyped Nationals, 9-4.

Mookie Betts had himself a day against Washington, robbing Bryce Harper of a home run in center field, stealing two bases on the same play and belting a three-run home run. Betts had a team-high four RBIs on the day and Dustin Pedroia, David Ortiz, Xander Bogaerts and Sandy Leon also drove in runs.

Starter Rick Porcello gave the Boston bullpen a rest, working eight innings and allowing three earned runs on four hits. Porcello struck out six Washington batters on 112 pitches.

The Red Sox (5-2) are back at it at Fenway tonight (6 p.m., NESN) as they will send Justin Masterson to the mound. Stephen Strasburg will take the hill for the Nationals.

By the numbers

Rick Porcello is in the good graces of Red Sox fans after his eight-inning performance on Monday. Against Philly last week, Porcello allowing three earned runs but lost. Against the Nats Monday, he allowed three earned runs and won. His season ERA sits at 3.86.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Tigers
(6-0)

Many wondered how the Tigers would be after losing two of their top starting pitchers but they clearly haven't missed them thus far. At the plate, Detroit is once again led by Miguel Cabrera, who is batting .520. They also have the players with the top three batting averages in the American League through one week.

No. 2

Royals
(6-0)

Few saw this coming from the defending AL champs. They're allowing an AL-low 15 runs so far and that pace will allow them to win a ton.

No. 3

Braves
(5-1)

Nobody, I mean nobody, saw this start coming from the Braves, who swept the Marlins in Miami. Jason Grilli already has three saves.

No. 4

Blue Jays
(4-2)

Toronto is going to hit, as shown by its offensive explosion last year. So far in 2015 they're led by Jose Reyes' .417 average.

No. 5

Red Sox
(4-2)

The first turn through the rotation went tremendous for the Sox, but Clay Buchholz had the worst outing of his career in his second start of the season.

No. 6

Reds
(4-2)

Cincy was picked to finish at the bottom of the NL Central, but the long-ball has led them to a 4-2 start. They did lose two of three to St. Louis, however.

No. 7

Rockies
(4-2)

By now it's clear that the Rockies are going to score a ton — so far an NL-leading 35 runs — but pitching is still a major issue.

No. 8

Padres
(4-3)

All the offseason additions have the Padres primed for a big year. They swept the Giants and have a plus-eight run differential.

No. 9

Dodgers
(3-3)

L.A. didn't get off to the start it had hoped for, but there's no doubt the Dodgers will rise quickly here. Adrian Gonzalez already has five homers.

No. 10

Mariners
(3-3)

The Mariners are going to be fun to watch as evidenced by their series with the A's. Fernando Rodney has two saves so far.

No. 11

Orioles
(3-3)

Baltimore's pitching is going to be the biggest thing to watch as it has already allowed 32 runs. No team in the AL has allowed more than 33.

No. 12

Astros
(3-3)

The "player development" Astros are nearly grown up. They might not be a playoff team, but they appear to finally be on the rise.

No. 13

Mets
(3-3)

Bartolo Colon has won both of his starts thus far, and despite his age, he's proving he can still battle against the top teams in the majors.

Future of Bruins unclear

The Bruins failed to make the Stanley Cup playoffs for the first time in eight years. With the offseason just underway, the biggest questions surround the futures of general manager Peter Chiarelli and head coach Claude Julien. Each will continue in their respective roles for the time being. "The job uncertainty, the questions surrounding us — it's part of the job and you have to deal with it and just move forward," Chiarelli said Monday. "But it hasn't impacted my interviews, my discussions and my meetings with Claude. Business as usual."
